"Tuffy Leemans Day" was celebrated at the Polo Grounds in New York on December 7. The University's most illustrious football son receives a $1,500 Defense Bond, the gift of New York Giant fans, from James A. Farley. Dick Fishell, radio broadcaster, describes the ceremonies. On the left of the table are the beautiful trophy and watch which were presented to Tuffy by Dr. Robert H. Harmon on behalf of the General Alumni Association.

In the spring football practice picture below, three Colonials are racing their new head coach, Johnny Baker (right), who is young and active enough to pace them in a rough scrimmage or a fast sprint. A graduate of the University in 1934 and a star quarterback in his undergraduate days, Baker is the Colonials' first alumni head coach in nearly two decades. (See story, page 10)

The University's War-Time Program

"WE ARE AT WAR. The outcome of the conflict into which we are catapulted will seal the future of western civilization. Our hearts are heavy with inaction and anxiety. Every citizen wants to aid.

"We rededicate this University to the service of our nation. In whatever way she can serve, she will gladly serve. We rededicate the lives of her membership to the high purposes of citizenship. Among other things this means the maintenance of quiet courage. We live in a university community. We must keep faith with its ideals and know that we best serve by carrying on our teaching and our studies. Our trust is even more sacred in times of stress. We must ever hold before our people the supreme lesson of what the centuries say against the hours.

"We shall in the months to come be called upon for sacrifice. We shall meet it, and, as far as possible, meet it together. We are of one body. May each member with calm determination carry on his task until called for other service.

"We are thankful for the privilege of casting our strength against the forces of evil. We pledge our lives for light, and say to the President of the United States, 'Our President, we stand ready'."

Before a hushed assemblage of faculty and administrative assistants, the President of the University delivered his message. It was December 8, 1941, the day after the fateful Japanese attack that thrust the United States at last into World War II. Confused and distraught, as were most Americans, by the shocking events at Pearl Harbor, members of the teaching and administrative staffs gathered at the President's call for an explanation of the University's first steps in the war program. Following his own brief, stimulating address which rededicated the University to the service of the nation in its perilous hour, President Marvin called upon Dr. Elmer Louis Kayser, Dean of University Students, to summarize the epoch-making events which had drawn us into the worldwide conflict. Dean Kayser responded with one of his most lucid and inspirational addresses, as he depicted the grave world situation and the stern tasks facing all Americans. He outlined particularly the responsibilities facing the University faculty and called upon each in his field —law, medicine, or history—to continue the search for truth. "This above all times is no time to abandon truth," he said. "If it is worth doing in happy days, it is imperative that it be done in these dark and critical days. The obligation is to do it more thoroughly, to be more zealous in the pursuit of truth—why?—because today truth is needed—and tomorrow; and only through truth can there be that tomorrow."

All preparations which the University

The Accelerated Schedule

TO ACCOMMODATE its students who wish to accelerate their college training during the war emergency, and to maintain at the same time its consistently high standards, the University has reorganized its program on the following basis:

1. Two six-week Summer Sessions, which together will be the equivalent of one semester's work, have been established and have been fitted into the year-round program, so that the University is in effect on a trimester basis. This will enable students to complete the usual four-year course in two years and three summers.

2. The University Law School has dropped its admission requirement of the bachelor's degree. Students are now admitted who have completed three years of pre-legal training. If they have completed one of those three years at the University, they may receive an A.B. degree from George Washington after one year of law training. Three years of law training are required for an LL.B., thus bringing into effect a six-year Arts and Law course. By taking advantage of the two six-week summer sessions, however, students may reduce the six-year course to four years and four summers, and the regular three-year law course to two years and two summers.

3. The freshman class in the School of Medicine will start classes on June 8 instead of September 21. The next freshman class will open February 8, 1943. By means of a required summer term, students will graduate from the School of Medicine in just short of three years, instead of the customary four years.

4. Students who are forced to withdraw from the University after the completion of a substantial portion of their work, because of military service or the decentralization of governmental departments, will be permitted to complete their courses by independent study and by correspondence with their respective professors.

5. In line with the general aims of the accelerated program, changes have been made in the academic calendar for the second semester of the current year. Easter recess for students was curtailed from five days to two. The final day for classes will be May 16 instead of May 23, and the examination period will be completed May 29. The Commencement date has been advanced from June 10 to June 3 to allow more time between the close of the regular winter term and the opening day of registration for the first summer session on June 19.

The revised schedule for the second semester and for the Summer Sessions is as follows:

May 16—End of classes, second semester
May 20-29—Final Examinations
June 3—Commencement
June 8—Opening of the School of Medicine
June 19, 20—Registration for the first Summer Sessions term
June 22—Beginning of classes
July 31—End of classes
Aug. 3—Examination Study Period
Aug. 4—Final Examinations
Aug. 5—Registration for the second term
Aug. 6—Beginning of classes
Sept. 16—End of classes
Sept. 17—Examination Study Period
Sept. 18—Final Examinations
Sept. 23—Registration for the fall term
Sept. 28—Beginning of classes.

The Law School schedule:

June 15—Registration and Opening of Classes for the first summer term
July 24—End of classes
July 27—Examinations
July 28—Opening of second term
Sept. 4—End of classes
Sept. 5—Examinations

had made to be ready for such a situation were reviewed. Dr. Donnell B. Young, head of the student-faculty Civilian Defense Committee, explained the air-raid system which had been set up a few weeks before. Mr. Charles Merry, Business Manager of the University, announced that the University would go on 24-hour emergency telephone service, that changes in the electric light set-up would be made for emergency black-outs, and that black-out curtains were on order for campus buildings. While the faculty lunched in the adjoining room in the Hall of Government and listened to the address of President Roosevelt to the nation, the student body, more serious than at any time in many years, gathered on Lisner Terrace and in the Student Club to hear, via amplifying systems hurriedly set up, the President's words also.

That evening members of the student body, dismissed from their classes, filled the gymnasium, where President Marvin again reviewed the University's position and responsibilities in war-time. Dean William C. Johnstone, Jr., of the Junior College interpreted for the students, as Dean Kayser had for the faculty, the events of the past few days and outlined for them their role in the new world picture.

Most immediate announcement on the effect of the war on the University came from Alumni Secretary Lester Smith, who issued a list of all alumni in war zones. Among the alumni holding important positions in the Far East are the Ambassador to Japan, Joseph C. Grew, who received the degree of Doctor of Laws from the University in 1926, and Nelson T. Johnson, the American Minister in Canberra, capital of Australia, who attended the University in 1906 and 1907 and received the degree of Doctor of Laws in 1932.

The outbreak of war did not find the University totally unprepared. Already certain adjustments had been made, particularly in the field of defense courses. For a year the University had been conducting Engineering Defense Training courses in co-operation with the United States Office of Education. Forty courses in defense engineering have been established for students with two years' credit in engineering or equivalent experience. Tuition for all students is paid by the Government. Since the inauguration of these courses, 5,500 have enrolled in one or more. Rooms in the old Fine Arts building of the University were renovated to accommodate these classes.

The University Law School, placed on an emergency basis at the beginning of the 1941-42 academic year, inaugurated a semester system, whereby courses formerly taught throughout the year on a two-hour a week basis were completed in one semester by holding classes four hours a week. Final examinations are given at the end of each semester, just as they are in the undergraduate departments.

The School of Medicine in September announced a freshman class increased from 65 to 79, the largest ever admitted, in view of the growing need for physicians, and graduated one-half of its senior class in February (instead of in June) as a result of Summer Sessions study.

In all fields of administration, there was a definite effort to allow students to complete their education as quickly as possible, particularly those faced by the draft who had only a semester or a year to complete before graduation.

Neither were student organizations slow to act. Looking at national defense from the women's angle, the Women's Athletic Association had assembled college women of the District for a banquet at which Alice Marble, national head of physical training for women, spoke. More than 200 attended. The Women's Student Government Association organized knitting for the Red Cross, and other organizations adopted similar programs to meet the emergency situation.

The actual declaration of war brought to the University at large, as to the nation, new energy, new efforts, and a recognition of new responsibilities. In the attitude of students, who formerly clung to the isolationist viewpoint, an abrupt change was noted. An attack on the United States forced them to reverse position. Recognizing the confusion in which students found themselves, the University recommended that they continue courses already in progress until assigned by the Government to specific fields of service.

The call to arms was making inroads into the faculty ranks also. On September 23, military leave was announced for 20 members of the teaching staff, and the number has increased in recent months. From the Engineering and Chemistry faculties the Government has drawn experts to fill important technical posts relating to the war effort. The staff of the School of Medicine was depleted also.

Those of the University faculty who answered the call to service are: from the School of Medicine, Dr. Emil H. Bauers-feld, Clinical Instructor in Medicine; Dr. Alfredo Emanuel Briguglio, Clinical Instructor in Medicine; Dr. Austin B. Chinn, Associate in Medicine; Dr. William H. Clements, Clinical Instructor in Medicine; Dr. Elmer W. Fugitt, Associate in Medicine; Dr. Frank B. Geibel, Clinical Instructor in Obstetrics and Gynecology; Dr. Luther Gray, Fellow in Surgery; Dr. Stewart M. Grayson, Clinical Instructor in Surgery; Dr. Clayton B. Hixson, Associate in Obstetrics and Gynecology; Dr. Gerald A. Hopkins, Clinical Instructor in Urology; Dr. Camp Stanley Huntington, Clinical Instructor in Medicine; Dr. Richard Jackson, Clinical Instructor in Surgery; Dr. Robert J. Kassan, Fellow in Medicine; Dr. Zigmund Levensohn, Clinical Instructor in Neurology; Dr. L. Keith MacClatchie, Clinical Instructor in Dermatology and Syphilology; Dr. H. J. R. McNitt, Associate in Obstetrics and Gynecology; Dr. Albert E. Meisenbach, Jr., Clinical Instructor in Ophthalmology; Dr. Reginald Henry Mitchell, Clinical Instructor in Surgery; Dr. Arthur James Mourot, Clinical Instructor in Surgery; Dr. John H. Peacock, Clinical Instructor in Pediatrics; Dr. Luther Henry Snyder, Clinical Instructor in Medicine; Dr. John W. Trevis, Associate in Medicine; Dr. Joseph J. Wallace, Clinical Instructor in Medicine; Dr. Jonathan M. Williams, Fellow in Neurosurgery and Neuropathology.

From other schools of the University: Norman Bruce Ames, Professor of Electrical Engineering; Dr. Harold Friend Harding, Associate Professor of Public Speaking; James Ebenezer Pixlee, Professor of Physical Education for Men; Dr. Edward Teller, Professor of Physics; Dr. Robert C. Vincent, Instructor in Chemistry; Chester Charles Ward, Associate Professor of Law; and Dr. John W. Brewer, Associate Professor of International Law.

Dr. Arthur Frederick Johnson, Professor of Mechanical Engineering, has left the University to serve as co-ordinator of shipbuilding in the United States Maritime Commission; and Professor Frank A. Hitchcock, Professor of Civil Engineering, is devoting all of his time as Director of the National Defense Engineering Training Courses at the University. Those of the School of Engineering staff who are dividing their time between the University and Defense service elsewhere are: Alfred Ennis, Assistant Professor of Electrical Engineering, who

"Inter-American Understanding"

THE Winter Convocation, traditionally held on George Washington's birthday, was moved back this year to February 23 because the usual date came on a Sunday. This year's Convocation was dedicated to "Inter-American Understanding," and the University conferred honorary degrees upon four diplomatic representatives to the United States. Three-hundred and eighty-seven students were graduated from the various colleges, schools and divisions of the University.

A large audience greeted with loud applause the granting of degrees to Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, Ambassador of Mexico; Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, Ambassador of Ecuador; Dr. Adrian Recinos, Minister of Guatemala; and Dr. Hector David Castro, Minister of El Salvador.

Miss Rose Bampton, noted Metropolitan soprano, was the Convocation artist. She sang eight selections and received a tremendous ovation to which she responded with two encores. The beautiful and gifted opera star sang arias from Mozart, Mascagni, and Verdi, followed by selections from Beach, Hageman, Sacco, and Warren.

An unusual feature of the graduation exercises was the presence among the graduating medical students of Francisco Castillo Najera, son of the Mexican Ambassador, and Alex Castro, son of the Minister of El Salvador.

Rose Bampton

The honorary degrees were conferred by President Marvin with the following citations:

Ambassador Najera—"Famous son of Durango; recognized master in medicine, versatile man of letters, discriminating diplomat who, by reason of character and resourcefulness, has caused his name to be associated with those who believe in the dignity of government and worthiness of life."

Ambassador Alfaro—"Distinguished

son of an eminent patriot father, graduate of West Point, thoughtful student of political and military institutions, competent counsellor to his government, servant of fine courage."

Minister Recinos—"Worthy friend, leader in legal education, discriminating contributor to the fields of international comity and fellowship, by his deep and true understanding gifted to interpret both the people he represents and this nation to which he is accredited."

Minister Castro—"Illustrious citizen of El Salvador, acknowledged leader and worthy civil servant, patient and steadfast to preserve high standards in understanding among states, one in whom the end of life is high service."

President Marvin, in his brief charge to the graduating class, said a new era now dawning "will break down false material values and recognize man as the bearer of absolute truth." He predicted that democracy will prevail because it contains more spiritual values than any other form of political organization.

"Faith in the spirit shall make you free," he said. "The material and sensate interpretation of the past four centuries is being outgrown. Man's mind is bursting through old forms of thinking. A far greater crisis is upon us than that of war. You and I are privileged to be present at the birth of a new era."

Extension Division Created

In keeping with the University's desire to spread its benefits to students and communities away from the campus proper, President Marvin recently announced the establishment of an Extension Division to operate in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, and the District of Columbia.

President Marvin named Dr. Sidney B. Hall, nationally known educator and former State Superintendent of Instruction in Virginia, as head of the new division. The extension program is already in operation with courses being given in Frederick, Maryland; Fairfax, Virginia; Arlington County, Virginia; Shepards-town, West Virginia; and the District of Columbia.

Dr. Hall, who became a member of the Faculty last September, is Professor of Education and is widely experienced in that field of learning. Holder of four degrees from three universities, he received his A.B. degree from William and Mary College; his M.A. degree from the University of Virginia; and his Ed.M. and Ed.D. degrees from Harvard University. He was associated with Virginia schools for more than 25 years, serving successively as high school principal from 1913 to 1924, State Superintendent of Secondary Education from 1924 to 1928, and State Superintendent of Instruction from 1931 to 1941. He was Professor of Education at Peabody College from 1928 to 1931.

In discussing the Extension Division recently, Dr. Hall said that he believed the University's newest educational program would prove profitable to the communities it serves and to the University. Credit and non-credit courses are being given, but both types must meet the standards set by the University's Faculty and Board of Trustees.

Credit courses are regarded as of equal value with those given on the campus and are conducted in the same manner. Courses given must be approved by the Department and the Executive Officer of the Department concerned. Instructors, in all classes under the new division, must be regular members of the Faculty or instructors approved by the Executive Officer of the Department and the President of the University.

Non-credit courses may be entered without examination or regard for previous training, but a planned program of study will be given in each of them. These courses are designed particularly for men and women who wish to develop talents for self-expression and for persons who like to study purely for pleasure and cultural development.

Establishment of the new division represents the first addition to the University's Schools, Colleges and Divisions, which now total 13, since 1934, when the Inter-American Center was made an integral part of the educational curriculum.

"Blitz Medicine"

A considerable portion of the School of Medicine's Tenth Annual Post Graduate Clinic, held February 20 and 21, was devoted to a symposium on war medicine. A number of the outstanding physicians associated with the Army, the Navy, various Government organizations and private institutions participated in the clinic. The meeting was concluded with the sixteenth annual banquet of the George Washington Medical Society at the Mayflower Hotel. The Honorable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai, Agent General for India in the United States, delivered the principal address at the banquet. A picture of the Class of 1912 was presented to the School of Medicine by Dr. Oscar B. Hunter.

Five hundred physicians from various sections of the country were in attendance at one or more sessions. The first day was devoted to problems concerning childbirth. Speakers on the program included Dr. Clifford B. Lull of the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, Dr. Robert A. Ross of the University of North Carolina, Dr. Frederick H. Falls of the University of Illinois and Dr. Samuel M. Dodek of the University faculty.

Dr. Lull declared that notable advances have been made in the science of obstetrics which may result in a lower maternal mortality and fewer still births. He spoke specifically on the use of analgesic agents to reduce the pains of childbirth. He said at least a 90 percent amnesia can be produced by the skilled obstetrician in the proper surroundings. This means, he stressed, a hospital with a well-equipped obstetrical service. Use of pain-killing drugs usually is not advisable in the home.

Taking part in the symposium on war medicine were: Col. Philip W. Huntington of the U. S. Army and Professor of Military Science and Tactics at the University; Brig. Gen. Larry B. McAfee, Assistant Surgeon General, U. S. Army; Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, Surgeon General, U. S. Navy; Dr. George Baehr, Chief Medical Officer, Office of Civilian Defense; Dr. Huntington Williams, Commissioner of Health, Baltimore, Maryland; Commander E. Harvey Cushing, U. S. Naval Reserve; Dr. John R. Mote, British Purchasing Commission; Capt. Charles S. Stephenson, U. S. Navy Medical Corps; and Major Harry F. Wilson, U. S. Army Medical Corps.

Knowledge of "blitz medicine" gleaned by Army and Navy observers abroad and by research laboratories was made available at the symposium. Based on the belief that American cities within a 200-mile radius will be subjected to bombing attack, emphasis was placed on steps to save U. S. civilians from the fate that befell Britons during the early days of the German aerial blitz.

Dr. Williams, who studied air raid medical administration in England for the Office of Civilian Defense, declared "blitz medicine" calls for immediate large-scale establishment of specially trained first-aid and ambulance corps and coordinated hospital services. At the head of these services in each area should be men and women capable of making split-second decisions, with authority to have them carried out, he asserted. In urging more hospital facilities for the handling of casualties, Dr. Williams pointed out that as little first-aid work as possible should be undertaken at the scene. "The main idea is to get the victim to the hospital as rapidly as possible," he concluded.

The program was arranged by Dr. Thomas M. Perry, chairman, and Dr. W. Warren Sager, Dr. Harry F. Dowling, Dr. Chester E. Leese, and Dr. Irving W. Winik, all of the University faculty.

Ideals vs. Aggression

"Mexico and the United States share common ideals and interests for the first time in history and those superior ideals ultimately will triumph over the unexpected and felonious aggression of the Axis powers."

Thus spoke Dr. Don Francisco Castillo Najera, Ambassador from Mexico to the United States, at the University's Fifth Annual Pan-American Conference, held January 12 and 13 in the U. S. Chamber of Commerce Auditorium.

"We are threatened by the same dangers," he said, "but the same glorious destiny smiles at us."

Reviewing the history of United States-Mexican relations, hampered from the beginning by the divergent political, cultural, and economic backgrounds of the two nations and the ineptness of their early diplomatic representatives, the Ambassador asserted, "It is surprising that the continuous causes of irritation did not result in disastrous and numberless armed conflicts."

Not until the establishment of the good-neighbor policy under the Roosevelt administration, Dr. Castillo Najera related, were Mexico's suspicions fully allayed. He said the new definition of "neighbor" had been broadened to include not only nations brought together by the accident of geographical contiguity, but a communion of fellowship among all the nations of the world.

Two other speakers, James S. Carson of the American and Foreign Power Co., Inc., and Dean Henry Grattan Doyle, preceded the Ambassador on the final evening of the program. Mr. Carson told the audience that with Europe and North America engaged in a destructive war, "the century ahead may belong to Latin America." Dean Doyle asserted the removal of linguistic handicaps must precede the establishment of better relations between North and South America, and added, "Good neighborliness on a sign-language basis simply will not work."

On the preceding program, William L. Schurz, Assistant Chief of the Division of Cultural Relations of the State Department; Manuel Jose Mendez, native of Panama and a student at the University; and Joshua B. Powers, representative of La Prensa and other Latin-American newspapers, addressed the Conference.

The Conference was started in 1937 and is held under the direction of George Howland Cox, Director of the Inter-American Center. Through its organization are brought together speakers from the fields of banking, commerce, education, and diplomacy to discuss Inter-American relationships.

High School Press Conference

The University's High School Press Conference, renewed under auspices of the Department of Journalism after a five-year lapse, proved to be one of the most successful meetings ever sponsored by the University. Under the skillful direction of Mrs. Marcelle LeMenager Lane, Executive Officer of the Journalism Department, sessions were arranged for November 28. The list of speakers included leading members of the newspaper profession. Present to hear B. M. McKelway, Managing Editor of the Washington Evening Star; Raymond Clapper, Scripps-Howard columnist; Eugene Meyer, Editor and Publisher of The Washington Post; and Frank Waldrop, Washington Times-Herald political writer, were more than 300 high school journalists and publications advisers from the District, Virginia, Maryland, and West Virginia.

Mr. McKelway described his training for the newspaper profession, mentioned his training on The Hatchet while attending the University, and spoke of his early days as a reporter on The Star. Mr. Clapper, who came to the Conference direct from a White House press conference, encouraged the young writers by telling them not to be afraid to enter the newspaper game if they really have their minds set on it. Mr. Waldrop advised the youthful journalists to continue their endeavor with consistency and to keep informed on what is taking place in the world in order to be prepared to write about it.

Highlight of the meeting came with the banquet at the Willard Hotel. Publisher Meyer addressed the gathering on his trip to London in an Army bomber and described his tour which covered a considerable area of England. Mr. Meyer said that the English seemed to him more determined than ever to pursue the war to a victorious finish, and expressed particular gratefulness for America's help in beating back Germany's tremendous attack.

Jack Raedy, editor in chief of the Gonzaga Aquilian, was elected president of the organization which, upon his election, became The George Washington University High School Press Association.

The Press Association will meet again at the University during the next academic year, probably in November.

"Stop Japan or Fold Up in the Far East"

Dr. Hugh Grant (A.M. '31) envisioned the impending war in the Pacific between the United States and Japan long before the treacherous attacks on Hawaii, the Philippines, Guam, Wake Island, and Midway Island.

In an address November 15 before the Education Guild, which is composed of candidates for the Doctorate of Education degree at the University, Dr. Grant said: "The Far Eastern situation is most critical and unless Japan is stopped the United States might as well fold up her tents and withdraw her citizens and her interests in that area."

Dr. Grant is a former minister to Albania and Siam, and returned only recently from the Far East. He was in Albania at the time of the Italian invasion in 1939.

Dr. Grant

Generally indicative of the attitude he assumed on the situation, Dr. Grant said, "Japan is sitting on the sidelines of the world struggle in Europe and is watching for opportunities to extend her economic and political control."

Asserting that the United States has the choice of "either withdrawing and giving up its commercial interests, including the Philippines, or setting about the grim business of stopping the Japanese," Dr. Grant emphasized either course would have a great effect in the United States.

"The Japanese have great respect for our Navy," he said. "Great pity we do not have now a two ocean navy, the lack of which I have considered for a long time to be a fundamental defect in our national defense program. We should never be dependent on the navy of any other power for the defense of our own interests."

Describing the totalitarian technique, Dr. Grant said nearly always the conquerors work from within "through intrigue, subsidizing the press and radio, flattery, exchange of missions, and by means of down-right heavy diplomatic pressure and coercion whenever the occasion demands it. And the Japanese," he concluded, "stop at nothing."

Fifty Years for Kappa Sigma

The Alpha Eta chapter of Kappa Sigma Fraternity celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of its installation at The George Washington University on February 22 at a dinner meeting at Hotel Twenty-four Hundred at which President Cloyd Heck Marvin, Hamilton W. Baker, Worthy Grand Master, and Dr. Robert H. Harmon, President of the General Alumni Association, were guests of honor. Elmer Louis Kayser, Professor of European History and Dean of University Students, reviewed the history of fraternities at the University, paying special tribute to the activities of Alpha Eta.

The chapter was installed in the winter of 1892, the second social fraternity to appear on campus.

Present officers of the Washington chapter, Alpha Eta, include Richard S. E. Burrows, Grand Master; Harold G. Moore, Grand Procurator; George Stake-man, Grand Master of Ceremonies; Charles B. Eggen, Jr., Grand Treasurer; Clifford Houff, Grand Scribe; and J. Harold Gooding, Social Chairman.

Members of the chapter, which is very active on the campus, this year have held a number of prominent student positions including the presidency of the Interfraternity Council, presidency of Gate and Key, chairmanships of certain Homecoming committees, and membership on the Board of Editors of the University Hatchet.

Alumnæ Attend Colonial Dinner

Women alumnæ of the University met in "An Evening at Martha Washington's" dinner party February 25 at the Y.W.C.A. in celebration of the birthday of George Washington.

The dinner, which was sponsored by the committee for the Women's Activities Building Campaign, was a colonial affair. Mrs. Joshua Evans, Jr., of the Board of Trustees spoke on "The Colonial Background of the University" and described the old village of Hamburg, on which site the University is now located. Colonial music was furnished by Mrs. Herold Jacob Wiens (Betty Burnett, '39); and Miss Helen Taylor, '29, spoke on the need for a women's activities building at George Washington.

The annual "Buy a Brick" drive for funds has been restricted to the campus this year, she said; but the committee is still hoping to keep the need for the building before the alumnæ during the war emergency.

Mrs. Robert Stearns (Ermytrude Vaiden, '27) headed the committee in charge of arrangements.

Dr. Croissant

One of the University's outstanding teachers, Dr. DeWitt Clinton Croissant, who taught English here for more than 25 years, died August 15 at home. He would have been 65 years old on August 23.

Dr. Croissant started his teaching career in 1901 at the University of Colorado. He came to The George Washington University in 1903 as an instructor, becoming

Our Benefactors...

Abram Lisner

By Sue Burnett

IN THE LONG LINE of benefactors who have enabled The George Washington University to grow from the small Columbian College, chartered by Congress in 1821, to its present stature, Abram Lisner stands as one of the greatest.

In the succeeding issues of the Alumni Review, an article outlining the generosity of each of those benefactors will appear. Although the contributions of some, from a pecuniary point of view, may have been smaller than others, they were none the less important.

To Abram Lisner the University is indebted for the satisfaction of two great needs: a library and an auditorium. These two great gifts were the culmination of Mr. Lisner's long association with the University, which dated back to 1909 when he became a member of the Board of Trustees. Despite this long association, however, Mr. Lisner must remain a question-mark to anyone who would seek to look beyond his generosity to portray his real personality.

A reticent, self-effacing man in every respect, Mr. Lisner as a personality is revealed almost entirely in his deeds alone. His generosity made itself felt on the University campus and throughout the city, yet there are few who can give more than a vague description of him.

That he was keen and alert is agreed upon. That he was an excellent business man is borne out by his success. His talent as a pianist was known to a great many people, yet few knew any more than this. Of his inner thoughts, his attitude toward life, little is known. His great benefactions, however, indicate that he was a man with keen foresight, who sought to benefit mankind.

In giving the University $250,000 before his death for the construction of a new library building, Mr. Lisner was recognizing the growing requirements of a student population which had reached into the 8,000's. For the proper cultural development of the University, an expanded library was essential. The library which his magnanimity made possible was completed in 1939, a fine six-story building which towers over the campus and forms a link between the Social Science Hall and the Biological Science Building on G Street. An airy building, with large windows, it was designed for utility rather than ornateness, and it serves the needs of the student body in a very practical fashion. To make place for this new building old Lisner Hall, famous in earlier days for its "concrete campus," squeaky wooden steps, and chapel on the second floor, was razed. This building had carried the only recognition of his generosity which Mr. Lisner himself ever saw. Sometime after coming to the University as its President, Dr. Marvin had recommended that a plaque be placed on the library building, dedicating it to this University friend.

Harris and Ewing

Mr. Lisner's gift of $750,000 for an auditorium, granted in his will, was no less important in the growth of the University's facilities; for graduation exercises, dramatic performances, and public lectures heretofore have been held in rented or borrowed halls.

The auditorium lacks only a few months of completion. Delayed by difficulties over priorities, the building when completed will house, in addition to the large assembly hall, public speaking classrooms and a complete set-up for radio production.

In these two gifts alone, Mr. Lisner has made possible service, not for a few, but for thousands. The nature of his gifts is a credit to his foresight.

In Mr. Lisner's association of almost 30 years with the University, his beneficence was continually felt. He was particularly close to former President Charles Stockton, who served the University when it was operating under strained financial burdens. At one critical point, Mr. Lisner supplied the funds to pay the salaries of members of the faculty who otherwise would have gone unpaid. Dean William Allen Wilbur, Professor Emeritus of English of the University, recalls that he was one of those who would not have received his salary as usual had it not been for Mr. Lisner's timely response to the situation. "Years later during his last illness Mr. Lisner came to my office," Dean Wilbur said, "and I told him of my great gratitude for this service. With tears in his eyes, he said, 'Do you know that?' and I replied, 'Indeed I do, and I shall never forget it.'"

In keeping with his customary reticence, Mr. Lisner was not one to publicize his generosity, and was no doubt genuinely surprised to discover that this one was known. It was Mr. Lisner also who later paid off the existing indebtedness on the G Street property where the old library stood, and for this reason, in particular, Dr. Marvin suggested the plaque.

Through the years a close bond of friendship and affection grew between Mr. Lisner and President Marvin that resulted in the President's being named, with Mr. Leon Tobriner and Mr. George W. White, as executor of the Lisner estate. In the last year of his life when the sorrow of Mrs. Lisner's death weighed heavily upon him, he turned constantly to President Marvin for friendship and counsel.

Mrs. Lisner had been as devoted to the University as her husband, and had been an active supporter of all affairs sponsored by Columbian Women. Her gifts were always worded "Mr. Lisner and I," in expression of the great unity and harmony that existed between them. At the time that Columbian Women sponsored Ethel Barrymore in a benefit performance, Mrs. Lisner was the first to buy a box, paying $100 for it, an amount far over the cost. When it was known that President and Mrs. Coolidge would attend the benefit, held to raise funds for scholarships, Mr. and Mrs. Lisner gladly relinquished their box to the Coolidges.

One lesser known gift of great importance to the University was made by Mrs. Lisner. Mrs. Joshua Evans, Jr., of the Board of Trustees, had suggested that the University would be greatly improved by gardening and landscaping. With her customary thoughtfulness and generosity, Mrs. Lisner responded immediately. It was at that time, 1930, that the present University Garden Specialist, Mrs. Lillian Smith, was brought to George Washington; and it was due to the initial gift and interest of Mrs. Lisner that the University campus has been made attractive with shrubbery and flowers.

Mr. Lisner, as Mrs. Evans has described him, was "intensely a citizen of Washington." His many gifts, granted in his will, are ample proof. Children's Hospital, the Washington Hebrew Home for the Aged, and Emergency Hospital were all beneficiaries of his will. Outstanding among his gifts was the provision that $1,500,000 of his estate should be used to establish the Abram and Laura Lisner Home. This home, now completed, is novel in its type. For aged white women, it is open to women of "good disposition" and allows no discrimination as to religious belief, nationality, or descent. The home, which numbers a "student" government among its activities, provides an opportunity for elderly women to express their talents in handicrafts and encourages them in the practical tasks which they enjoy. In this gift, likewise, Mr. Lisner showed that he possessed a deep understanding of how best to apply his fortune for the good of humanity.

The fortune with which Mr. Lisner was able to do so much for the University and for the city of Washington was accumulated as owner and president of the Palais Royal Department Store.

Beginning as manager of a Washington branch of his brother's New York store, he later became owner of this shop, then located where the Raleigh Hotel now stands. Costume jewelry was a specialty in this store and was abundantly displayed in the window. Mr. Leon Tobriner, a close friend of Mr. Lisner, now laughingly recalls a sign, typical of the times, which hung in the window and read: "Notice to Burglars—These are not Diamonds." Mr. Lisner's business grew rapidly, and by the early 1900's he had acquired a considerable fortune. Unusually capable in business management, he was called at this time the "best businessman south of New York" by John Claflin of the A. B. Claflin Company of New York, then the largest wholesale dry goods firm in the country.

Mr. Lisner's success story is the story of a self-made man. It is the story of an immigrant brought to this country, as in so many cases, by older brothers who had already established themselves here. Born in Waldorf, Sachsen Meinengun, Germany, on October 5, 1855, he came to this country at the age of 13 with his father, mother, and sisters. He was tutored privately in general studies and in music, because he was of too nervous a temperament for public schools, and then went to work for his brother, George, in New York.

A picture of this young merchant, made at the time he was just entering business, hung in Mr. Lisner's office in the Palais Royal in Washington, and he seldom lost an occasion to point it out to his friends with justifiable pride. Because he believed in people who made their own way in the world, he was interested in the University's part-time students, who, by the time of World War I had increased greatly in number. In his association with the University as a member of the Board of Trustees, he showed great interest in the students, as in all affairs of the school; and he and Mrs. Lisner were fond of driving together past the University at the sunset hour. This picture of the aged couple driving frequently by the campus is a memory which lingers in the minds of many who knew them.

In personal appearance, Mr. Lisner was quite small and wiry and was meticulous in his courtesies. He was active, keen, and methodical, and had an infinite memory for details. President Marvin has described him as having "one of the most alert minds I have ever known."

As a talented musician himself, his interests centered greatly in all musical events in Washington. Both he and Mrs. Lisner were fond of the theatre also;

and the honorary Master of Arts degree which was bestowed on him in 1918 by the University was in recognition of his patronage of local musical and artistic enterprises. His home at 1723 Massachusetts Avenue contained a number of lovely objects of art which he cherished.

Perhaps the characteristic which stands out most obviously in Mr. Lisner's rather secluded life was his adoration of his wife, Laura. It is she to whom the University library is dedicated. It was an unusual coincidence, therefore, which brought his death several years ago on the same day and at the same hour as Mrs. Lisner's the year before. Mrs. Lisner died March 26, 1937, and Mr. Lisner March 26, 1938.

At the time of his death a statement on behalf of the Trustees of the University was issued by Secretary Harry Cassell Davis:

"He was the highest type of trustee—efficient, devoted, philanthropic, and a friend not only of the University, where much of his interest centered, but of the entire community."

When his great gift of the auditorium to the University was made known in the following month, President Marvin commented:

"Mr. Lisner's gift leaves all associated with The George Washington University with a deep sense of gratitude and of responsibility."

"It is our high resolve that this gift in our keeping shall be so ordered as to benefit to the fullest possible extent the academic community and the community of Washington, thus carrying into fulfillment Mr. Lisner's great dream."

assistant professor in 1905. From 1910 to 1916, he was successively assistant professor, associate professor and director of extension at the University of Kansas. He returned to his English professorship at George Washington in 1916. In addition to his teaching duties, Dr. Croissant served as general field agent of the Simplified Spelling Board in 1915-16, and as special investigator of the U. S. Office of Education in 1918-19.

He was one of the 19 professors honored last April by the General Alumni Association of the University for their loyal service to the institution. He received the status of Professor Emeritus last June.

PACING THE COLONIALS IN SPORTS

Baker Named Coach

JOHNNY BAKER, the crack quarterback of the Colonial eleven in 1933 and more recently an assistant varsity football coach at the University, is now at the helm in football, having recently been named to succeed Bill Reinhart as head coach. Baker handled the squad during the last two weeks of spring practice and now is buried in the mass of planning and detail that falls to every new head man.

In the general reorganization of personnel and assignments in the Department of Men's Physical Education and Athletics, announced by President Marvin, Baker assumes the top football coaching assignment; Reinhart has been named director of athletics. In this post, Reinhart replaces Max Farrington, who for the past year devoted only a portion of his time to this position. Farrington will continue to serve the University in a part-time capacity. He has been named to the newly-created position of Special Assistant to the President to advise on Physical Education and Athletics and he will continue as chairman of the faculty Athletic Committee.

His specific assignment in his new position will be to advise on the organization of a physical training program at the University to meet the new Army and Navy specifications. Reinhart will continue as basketball coach and may coach baseball next year also. Vinnie DeAngelis, named baseball coach recently to succeed E. K. Morris, who resigned, will enter some branch of the armed service next month.

Let's take a look at Baker, the new head coach. He's a native of Anson, Texas, and is lean, blond, and business-like. He's 35 years old and is the first alumnus to hold the head coaching reins at George Washington since the late Bryan Morse coached here in the early 'twenties. Baker's field generalship, blocking and extra-point kicking were outstanding for G.W. during the seasons of 1932 and 33.

He was marked early as likely coaching timber and the year after his graduation was named coach of football and track at Washington-Lee High School in nearby Arlington, Virginia. Baker quickly established himself as a top-flight scholastic coach in both sports. His football record at Washington-Lee from 1935 through 1940 was the best in the District of Columbia area. His teams won 41 games, lost 11, and tied 4. His 1937 and 1939 teams were undefeated; the 39 aggregation won ten straight games and this he rated his outstanding Washington-Lee team. He had only one losing season, 1938, when his team won four games and lost five.

Looking Ahead to Fall

With spring football practice completed and all loyal pigskin rooters beginning to awaken after their winter's slumber, it might not be amiss to glance at the grid schedule for next season. The list of games, very much in line with the schedules made up by the University's athletic officials in recent years, has been announced as follows:

October 3, University of Richmond, at home; October 10, Citadel, at Charleston, South Carolina; October 16, Furman, at home; October 24, William and Mary, at Williamsburg, Virginia; October 30, University of Kentucky, at home; November 7, Clemson, at Clemson, South Carolina; November 13, Wake Forest, at home; November 21, Georgetown, at home.

The schedule has been cut to eight games from nine and includes five games at home and three away. Six games are with Southern Conference opponents. These are Richmond, Citadel, Furman, William and Mary, Clemson, and Wake Forest. All but Richmond have been met with some regularity in recent years. It is fitting that the Richmond series open this fall because Johnny Fenlon, one of our graduates and a star George Washington player in 1931 and 1932, has recently been named head coach at Richmond.

Basketball Review

The varsity basketball squad stored its togs for the season in March with some disappointment over defeat in its last two games, with Georgetown and William and Mary. Just when it appeared that the Colonial cagers were well on the way to another outstanding season, they were beset by injuries and bad luck and they were far from happy over the outcome of these last two tilts. However, the season was a success. The team won 11 games and lost 9, broke its three-game losing streak in the Georgetown series with a convincing 45-36 triumph in the mid-January clash, followed this with a victory over the University of Maryland to clinch the district area championship, and wound up second in the Southern Conference season standings with 8 victories and 3 losses. The Colonials were the only Conference team to beat Duke, scoring a thrilling 55-53 triumph over the Blue Devils here after bowing to them by a single point at Durham.

In the Southern Conference championship tournament at Raleigh, North Carolina, Duke's power predominated and the Blue Devils walked off with their second straight loop crown. The Colonials, seeded second to Duke, were upset by William and Mary in the first-round engagement, blowing a 16-point lead with less than eight minutes remaining to be played in this heart-breaking battle. The collapse of this team in this game is one of sportdom's strangest happenings of the year. It was one of those things that just couldn't happen—but it did!

Zunic a Great Star

This game marked the passing of three fine seniors, Matt Zunic, the Colonials' gallant captain, who played the last three games under the handicap of serious injuries; Bobby Gilham, the star guard from Evansville, Indiana, and lanky Roy McNeil, a local Washington product. Zunic broke all George Washington scoring records and established a new three-year District of Columbia mark with 659 points. He broke his old one-year record for the University, set last winter, with 266 points.

Zunic is the most colorful George Washington athlete since Tuffy Leemans and was regarded by many as the outstanding all-time college basketball player in Washington. His driving, slam-bang style of play sparked the team to a number of notable victories and completely won the hearts of the University's enthusiastic students and alumni. His slashing style of play brought numerous injuries, most of them self-inflicted, as the season wore on and in the last three games he could hardly walk. But he insisted on playing through to the finish

THE UNIVERSITY AFIELD

The George Washington Victory Council

AS A SERVICE to our country in the present emergency the George Washington Victory Council has been established by the Board of Trustees of The George Washington University upon the recommendation of President Cloyd Heck Marvin. Authoritative information on vital current problems, summarized by a special Board of Review, will be distributed from time to time to members of the Council, which includes officers of the regional clubs and other alumni leaders throughout the United States. Alumni members may also nominate for membership interested individuals, including government officials, and officers of civic and fraternal organizations, who wish to receive the bulletins of the Council.

The Board of Review, whose function it is to prepare and evaluate confidential information for the members, will include some members of the University Faculty. By invitation, government officials and other experts from various public organizations will serve on the Board of Review. Such invitations will be issued when subjects from other special fields of knowledge are under consideration.

It is planned to make the findings of the Board of Review available by a printed bulletin sent to members, by issuing public notices to the press when the need arises as a contribution to national morale, and by co-operating with radio stations in arranging programs of the round table, conference, and public interview types.

Among the topics which have been suggested for consideration by the Board of Review are: Food rationing; the protection of the middle class against the evils of inflation; and, air-raid precautions in universities and high schools.

Robert E. Freer, member and former Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission has accepted the chairmanship of the Council and will supervise the work of the Board of Review.

Inquiries concerning membership and the work of the Council should be addressed to Lester A. Smith, Executive Secretary of the Council.

Alumni Luncheon

The annual luncheon of the General Alumni Association was held Saturday, April 18, in the Lee-Sheraton Hotel, Washington. Tribute was paid at the luncheon to three veteran members of the faculty who this year are completing their twenty-fifth year of service: Thomas Benjamin Brown, Professor of Physics; Charles Sager Collier, Professor of Law, and, Elmer Louis Kayser, Dean of University Students and senior Professor of European History.

The Honorable Paul V. McNutt spoke. Tribute to the veteran faculty members was paid by Henry Grattan Doyle, Dean of Columbian College. Dr. Robert H. Harmon, President of the Association, presided.

Samuel J. Flickinger was in charge, and was assisted by Mr. William J. Ellenberger, President of the Engineer Alumni Association; Miss Margaret M. Neumann, Treasurer, and Dr. Joseph H. Roe, Vice President of the General Alumni Association.

Regional Club Notes

Chicago

The Chicago Club met at dinner November 7 in the club rooms of the Chicago Bar Association to hear Dean Henry Grattan Doyle discuss "Latin America and National Defense." Dean Doyle discussed the awakening of the people of the United States to the importance of Latin America and suggested ways in which this interest could be utilized, not only to the immediate advantage of our own country in its problems of national defense, but in the difficult years which will follow the conclusion of the war. The study of the Spanish and Portuguese languages, he urged, has obvious importance, both now and in the future.

Hugh H. Clegg, former President of the Alumni Association and Assistant Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was guest of honor at a dinner meeting February 18. Mr. Clegg discussed the work of the Federal Bureau of Investigation during the war.

Cleveland

Officers and members of the Cleveland Alumni Club met at luncheon at the Guildhall, October 20, to hear Dean Elmer L. Kayser, Professor of History at the University, give an interesting and informative address on "The European Outlook."

The meeting also took the form of a glowing tribute to Miss Lillian C. Belden who has moved from Cleveland to Canton, Ohio, in recognition of her faithful and efficient service as Secretary of the Club since its organization more than ten years ago. Congratulatory letters and telegrams from President Marvin and others were read at the meeting. Miss Lucille M. Wunderlich, a faithful member of the Club, has been selected as Secretary to replace Miss Belden.

Los Angeles

Mr. Harry H. Semmes, President of the George Washington University Law Association, addressed a dinner meeting of the Alumni Club, November 13, at the Clark Hotel, on the progress of the University. There followed a round table discussion of student days at the University and of its recent growth. Mr. Semmes flew from San Francisco to address the meeting. Mr. William U. Handy, President of the Club, writes the Alumni Office that Mr. Semmes' talk was very interesting and instructive.

New York

Dean Robert W. Bolwell addressed members of the New York Alumni Club at their Spring Luncheon, March 26, in the New York Advertising Club. He was accompanied by Alumni Secretary Lester A. Smith, who made a report on the work of the Victory Council.

The following slate of officers was elected at the meeting of the Club: President, A. Bruce Bielaski, 04; vice-president, Vernon L. Brown, 27; second vice-president, Nelson Littell, 20, 22; vice-president in charge of scholarships, George H. Baston, Jr. 14; secretary, George L. Powell, 38; treasurer, John B. Lathrop, 34; the Board of Governors: Frank A. Howard, 11, 14; F. Bascom Smith, 24; Leland L. Chapman, 33; Wentworth B. Clapham, 29, 33; Herbert B. Nichols, 21; Wallace D. McLean, 98; Dale E. Hoffman, 24; Clair W. Fairbank, 04, 06; and Eugene S. Thomas, 29.

WITH THE ALUMNI

In the Service of Our Country

Graduates of The George Washington University are serving our country in this war as they have in every emergency since the founding of the University in 1821. We list below a selection which runs from private in the ranks to brigadier general and admiral. Alumni are urged to send us additional names so that when peace comes it will be possible to publish a complete record.

■ Eddie Amendola, A.B. 41, former member of the University's basketball and baseball teams, is serving in the army at Fort Eustis, Virginia.

■ Ralph S. Baker, LL.B. 31, is a Major in the 261st Regiment U.S.A.

■ Charles H. Beardsley, LL.B. 32, Major, U.S.A., is attached to the office of Undersecretary of War in Washington.

■ August M. Booth, LL.B. 32, Captain, U.S.A., is on the Army-Navy Munitions Board in Washington.

■ Daniel L. ALUMNI IN THE FAR EAST

ALUMNI of the George Washington University held important posts in the capitals of the Far East when war struck last December.

The veteran American Ambassador to Japan, Joseph C. Grew, is a Life Member of the George Washington University Alumni Association and received the degree of Doctor of Laws in 1926 from the University. Arrangements were under way for the transfer of Ambassador Grew and members of his staff from Japan to the United States at the same time officials of the Japanese Embassy leave this country.

In Canberra, the capital of Australia, Nelson T. Johnson, the American Minister, and Dr. Hsu Mo, the Chinese Minister, are fellow alumni as well as colleagues. Dr. Mo received the degree of Master of Arts in 1921. Mr. Johnson attended the University in 1906 and 1907 and received the degree of Doctor of Laws in 1932. In 1939 on his return to this country he addressed the faculty of the George Washington University in private session and received a special citation from President Marvin. Mr. Johnson, in a letter to the Alumni Office, writes that "Dr. Hsu Mo has arrived and taken up his duties here, and has an office and residence not far from my own. I have known Dr. Hsu Mo for nearly twelve years, and have enjoyed his friendship and have admired his work."

J. Holbrook Chapman, who attended the University from 1911 to 1917, was Second Secretary in the American Legation in Bangkok, Thailand.

The more than seventy graduates of the University living in China include native educators and officials and American missionaries and businessmen.

is with the Naval Research Laboratory; and George Strollo, Assistant Professor of Civil Engineering, and Howard Henry Koster, Assistant Professor of Mechanical Engineering, both of whom are with the Bureau of Yards and Docks. Dean Frederick M. Feiker of the School of Engineering likewise is giving some time to the National Inventor's Council.

By early January, from the office of Charles E. Merry, Business Manager, and from the Civilian Defense Committee, headed by Dr. Young and Student Chairman Robert Geran, came an extensive set-up, designed to take every precaution possible to make the University safe in the event of air raids. Classrooms in all buildings were equipped with shades of heavy, dark-green canvas, capable of hiding light from a 500-watt spotlight and of giving protection from flying glass. University classes, which begin at 8 A.M. and continue through 11 P.M., can be held with all light invisible from the streets or the sky.

As chief Air-Raid Warden of the University, Mr. Merry set up an organization utilizing 26 deputy wardens and their 65 assistants. First aid, fire, mechanical service, utility (to clean up debris), black-out, rescue, and evacuation squads were organized. Kept open 24 hours a day, the telephone switchboard was connected with the central communications system of civilian defense, so that the various stages of an air-raid alarm might be flashed instantly to the University. The bell system, reaching throughout the administrative and classroom buildings, was synchronized and will repeat the air-raid signals—five short rings for "alarm," three long rings for "all clear." The Civilian Defense Committee decided upon building traffic arrangements and designated certain rooms in every building as air-raid shelters. Rooms on the second and third floors were chosen in preference to underground rooms. First-aid stations were established in each building and completely supplied with all materials for immediate treatment of injuries. First-aid classes, under the direction of Dr. Young and the Civilian Defense Committee, opened—first for teachers of first aid (who gave up their precious Christmas holidays to study), then for the janitors, 42 of whom enrolled, and lastly for the Administrative Assistants of the University. First-aid classes for students were started early in February, as

Dr. Young, feverishly teaching one two-hour class after another, sought to gather enough qualified teachers to carry on. Two air-raid drills have been held for the entire University and have been very successful. The University has likewise participated in city-wide blackout tests, and has been able to conduct classes as usual without a glimmer of light showing from the streets.

With physical fitness programs in demand, both the Men's and Women's Physical Education Departments sought to extend the intramural program, in an attempt to promote physical well-being for all students. The limited gymnasium facilities, however, retarded this program, and only the coming of spring and the use of the surrounding parks can solve the problem. The Department of Physical Education for Men also lost to the armed forces two staff members, B. E. Phillips and Joseph Krupa, adding severe personnel problems to those already faced by the Department due to the war.

In many smaller, but important, ways, the University entered into the spirit of the Victory Program. Defense bonds were placed on sale in the Cashier's Office, and defense stamps in the Student Club; while University Librarian John Russell Mason was among the leaders in the opening of the Victory Book Drive. On one day alone the Library received 325 volumes, to be sent to camp libraries. Five professors of the University, busy as they were, donated their time to give "Orientation" lectures to the camps of Anacostia, Arlington, and Fort Myer. Under the direction of George Howland Cox of the Inter-American Center, the professors sought to acquaint the enlisted personnel of these cantonments with the significance of events since the Munich Conference in 1938. Dr. Lowell Joseph Ragatz, Dean Elmer Louis Kayser, Dean William C. Johnstone, Jr., Dr. Howard Merriman, and Mr. Cox delivered a total of more than 100 lectures.

The spirit with which the University entered into the war program recalls the co-operation in 1917 when the University sponsored a drive to sell Liberty Bonds, loaned its classroom facilities without charge to the Navy Department for instruction of newly appointed ensigns from civil life, joined in the nation-wide movement to raise funds for the college boys in the prison camps of Europe, and offered co-operation with the Bureau of Public Information in the distribution of reading material. In the drive to sell Liberty Bonds, the University set itself a goal of $2,000. In the first three days of the drive, $300 was collected from Columbia College alone. Women students in the University organized first aid classes and refreshment corps to help in the feeding of servicemen en route to war. The University had a Coast Artillery company of its own, and throughout the war had more than 500 students and faculty members in active service.

As the varied stages of World War II proceed, it is certain that the University will engage more and more in war activity, at the same time feeling the effect of war ever more strongly. In the meantime, the University has fulfilled the promise of its President to the President of the United States: "We pledge our lives for light, and say to the President of the United States, 'Our President, we stand ready'."

with his team. His injuries and the broken foot-bone sustained by Ed Gustafson, giant soph center, probably accounted for the team's loss to Georgetown in the second game and its stunning defeat by William and Mary.

Zunic and Gilham both were selected on the all-District of Columbia Collegiate five picked by the Washington Post. McNeil and Joey Gallagher, junior guard, were named to the second team.

New England

Dean Robert W. Bolwell was guest of honor and principal speaker at a dinner meeting in the Bradford Hotel in Boston on March 28. At the conclusion of the program, officers were chosen for the newest alumni organization, The George Washington University Alumni Club of New England: President, Richard J. Shea, 24; vice-president, Dr. Edwin E. Ziegler, 27, 28; secretary-treasurer, Eleanor V. Smith, 33.

Plans for the New England organization were initiated at Boston, November 5, at a luncheon in the Hotel Bradford. Dr. Cline N. Chipman, Associate in Anesthesia, was in charge of the luncheon and introduced Lester A. Smith, Alumni Secretary, who discussed the progress of the University and the benefits which would accrue from an active organization of the alumni in the New England States. The luncheon was also attended by a number of graduates of the Medical School who were in Boston for the annual meetings of the American College of Surgeons and the American Association of Anesthetists.
